

BECAUSE OF A LITTLE DOG

THE PROBABLY FATAL RESULT OF

QUARREL ABOUT HIM.

A Brother of the Boy who Owned him Shot by a Neighbor who had been Annoyed the Barking—Apparently a Brutal Act

Jacob Bulasser, a young Swiss, was shot and fatally wounded on Thursday night at his home in Union Hill, N. J., while quarrelling with Christian G. Schroeder. Buissier recently arrived in this country with his brothers, Joseph and Gottlieb, and his sister Anna. They moved to Union Hill, where they hired rooms in a large tenement house at Blum street and Hudson avenue. Among the other occupants of the house was Schroeder and his wife. Schroeder is advanced in years, but his figure is still erect and powerful. A few days ago Gottlieb Butan, 12 years of age, a bright, pleasant little fellow, came home from school followed by a small dog.

He was very fond of his new pet. A bed of old pieces of carpet was made for the animal in the hallway of the building near Schroeder's door. The dog was chained there during the night, and the Schroeders complained frequently that running. When he returned in the evening, he saw the dog sitting directly in front of the door leading from his apartments to the hallway. He was under the influence of liquor, and the sight of the dog made him furious. In this mood he quarrelled with Jacob and Joseph Bulsaer. A minute after they ceased talking, he shot at them.

the report of a gun was heard by all the tenants in the building, who, startled from their sleep, rushed, half clad, into the hall. They found Jacob Bulser lying on the floor, with blood flowing from a wound in the right side. His brothers were endeavoring to stop the blood.

A constable was summoned, and he arrested Schroeder. Recorder Schlechert began an investigation yesterday, which resulted in the formal commitment of Schroeder to the county jail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

RUX yesterday: "Schroeder last night wanted my brother Jacob to kill the dog, but I wouldn't do that, and then Schroeder became furious and called him a 'Dutch thief' and other names. Jacob told him to go into his own room and get out of the hall before I called the police."

Then Jacob said he would have Schroeder arrested. When Schroeder heard that he exclaimed: 'I'll give you all the arrest you want' and then ran into his own room. He came out a moment afterward with his shotgun in hand and shot Jacob in the back.

The wife of Schroeder said to the Recorder: "On Thursday night when my husband came home we sat down to eat supper. He had been drinking to excess and talked in a very loud tone, and began to abuse the Bujassers. I tried to pacify him, but he wouldn't keep quiet. Presently the Buissers, who had overheard some of his remarks, came to the door and tried to get in. The door was closed, but they forced it open. I sprang to it to close it against them, but they shoved me aside and entered. Jacob walked up to my husband and said, "I his fist at him. Christian ordered him to leave, but Jacob struck my husband a blow on the face, saying, 'Shut up or I'll kill you.' The blow made my husband very mad and excited, although it didn't hurt him much. He reached behind him for his shot gun and took hold of it. When the Bulwers saw him take the weapon they rushed at him and struggled with him to take it away. While they were pulling and tugging at him the gun went off and shot Jacob. The wounded man went out of the room and his brother followed him. When they had gone my husband

An American Soprano's Successful Debut

LONDON, Sept. 24.—The correspondent of the Times at Rome telegraphs as follows: "A young American soprano, Marie Van of Cincinnati, has made the daring attempt of appearing, for the first time on any stage, prima donna at the Holbourn Theatre, the theatre of the in Verdi's opera of "Rigoletto." The enormous theater, which holds four thousand people, was full. The audience received the debutants with absolute silence. Notwithstanding the natural agitation, which made her first notes uncertain, she went through the first scene, which was called out twice, and attained a well-deserved success.

cess. The Roman musical critics praise the quality a extent of her voice, which is strikingly sympathetic the good style of her acting, and, with reservations the want of training in the management of her voice a pronunciation of Italian words, predict for her a success career." The lady referred to is probably Miss V. Zandt.

Oleomargarine for Butter.
The Produce Exchange has addressed a letter to John Sherman stating that the receivers and exporters of actual butter exported are seriously at fault by reason of large exports of oleomargarine as butter. The Exchange informs Mr. Sherman that he would confer favor not only upon the Exchange, but upon the entire dairy interest of the country, by giving directions to have oleomargarine cleared as such, and not as butter.
